V. キャサリン(Kathryn)が書いた次の文章を読んで以下の問いに答えなさい。

Can hunting be good for animals? Yes, it can! Hunting can help animals in many ways.

With no hunting, some groups of animals get too big. This is a problem for all of the animals in the group. Take deer, for example. In some places, there are too many deer. There is not enough food for all of the deer. They are hungry. Many deer die, slowly and painfully. Others leave their homes to find food. They go into cities and are hit and killed by cars.

Hunters kill some of the deer to stop the number of animals from getting too big. Many people feel it is less cruel for the deer to die like this.

Marcos and Carol are whale hunters. They capture a whale, but they don't kill it. They put a small computer on the whale. It records what the whale does. It shows where the whale goes. Marcos and Carol learn about whales from the information. Then they try to help other whales.

Many people hunt animals to study them. They do not kill the animals. They capture them and record information about them. This helps people understand the problems of a group of animals. Later, people use this information to help the animals.

VI. 次の文章を読んで以下の問いに答えなさい。

On a cold and rainy day, Brian Anderson was driving down a country road in the rain after a long day at work.

He saw an elderly lady on the side of the road. She was standing next to her car and trying to get someone to stop and help her change a flat tire. Brian was really tired, but he stopped his car and got out.

When he saw the lady's face, he knew that she was scared. He wanted her to know that he wasn't going to hurt her. "Get in your car, and I'll fix your tire," he said.

After he fixed the tire, she got out of her car with her wallet.

"How much do I owe you?" she asked.

Brian needed the money, but he couldn't take it for helping someone in need.

"I can't take your money," he said. "But if someday you meet someone who needs help, please help them and think of me." The two people got in their cars and drove down the road, never expecting to see each other again.

The elderly lady was wet and tired, and so at the next town, she pulled into a café.

Nancy, the waitress, brought her a towel and hung up her coat to dry. Nancy was pregnant, but she worked hard to make the elderly woman feel comfortable.

When she was ready to leave, she handed Nancy a hundred-dollar bill. She went to get the change, but the lady gently put her hand on Nancy's and said, "No, you keep it."

Then when Nancy went to clean up the table, she found four-hundred more dollars under a napkin.

That night, when she was getting into bed in the small house, Nancy told her husband about the money. "It's just like a miracle," her husband said. They had been worrying about how to pay for the things their baby needed, and this money was really going to help.

Then, before falling asleep, the husband said, "Good night, Nancy."

"Good night, Brian," she replied.

It was a peaceful night.
